ARMY GENERAL ORDERS.

BY THE COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF.

BENGAL.

Head Quarters, Calcutta, 25th January 1866.

At a General Court Martial, assembled at Kohat, on Tuesday, the 19th day of December 1865, Madar Bux, Native Doctor, 3rd Sikh Infantry, attached to the Kohat Garrison, was arraigned on the following Charge:—With conduct to the prejudice of good order and military discipline, for having at Behadoor Kheyl, on the 4th of November 1865, with the intention of creating disaffection amongst the detachment there on duty, said to Subadar Ruhmanatoollah Beg, commanding the Station,—"Hindoos, who have taken medicine from me, have eaten cow; and Mahomedans pig"—words that affected

Finding.—The Court is of opinion that the prisoner is guilty of the charge preferred against him. With the exception of the words—"to Subadar Ruhmanatoollah Beg, commanding the Station,"—of which they do acquit him accordingly.

Sentence.—The Court sentences the prisoner to suffer two years imprisonment, with hard labor.

JEWUN SING, Subadar Major,
5th Punjab Infantry, President.

Kohat, 19th December 1865.

Remarks by his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief.—The Commander-in-Chief in India is unable to discover in the proceedings any proof of that part of the charge which imputes to the prisoner the intention of creating disaffection in the detachment. The prisoner was really guilty of making use of most insulting language to the patients under his charge, his intention being to quarrel with and offend them. This point is more especially shewn by the evidence of Lall Khan, Havildar. Under these circumstances His Excellency can only approve and confirm so much of the finding as is exclusive of the intention to create disaffection. The sentence is accordingly reduced to six months' imprisonment with hard labor.

W. R. MANSFIELD, General,
Commander-in-Chief in India.

Head Quarters, Fort William, Calcutta, Jan. 13th 1866.

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 8, 1866.

THE peremptory repudiation of Sir Charles Trevelyan's Budget in April last, by the Secretary of State, will serve as a finger post to the new Finance Minister in devising his financial plans for the coming year. Mr. Massey will take warning to avoid the rock on which Sir Charles Trevelyan wrecked whatever little modicum of financial reputation he enjoyed, and learn from the disorganised Budget which he inherited from his predecessor, a safe principle to guide him in providing for the national expenditure. The foremost fact which must stare any Indian Finance Minister in the face is the wonderful immunity of the wealthy classes of the country from taxation; and the first point which any one entrusted with the Chancellorship of our Indian Exchequer ought, naturally, to settle is how to place the taxation of the country upon a proper basis, by imposing a share of the national taxes upon the wealthy classes in a degree proportionate to their wealth and privileges. These classes could not be more exempted from taxation if they enjoyed the monopoly of governing, and exercised their legislative functions to their own extreme advantage. They are created by our rule, and exist by it; but virtually contribute as little to its support as the poorest classes in the country. Pblic works are starved, and the efficiency of the services is impaired, by a feeling akin to financial superstition, if we are to interpret that feeling by its outcome in the fact that the commercial classes are allowed to accumulate their large and increasing wealth without the sight of a tax-gatherer. In no other country in the world would they enjoy the same Arcadian and blissful exemption from the ordinary duties of citizenship. Every work of public improvement that is neglected or left undone from the stintedness of our revenue, is equivalent to a donation direct to the untaxed wealthy classes, and every suffering officer of Government is simply undergoing a period of protracted martyrdom and privation, to add by his suffering to the enormous wealth of the large capitalists of the Presidency towns. The fallacy of such a fiscal scheme lies upon its very surface. The agricultural population of the interior is taxed, it may not be heavily, but it is taxed, while the great mercantile classes which traffic in the produce are allowed to go untaxed on the even and glorious tenor of their way, blessing the benignant Government—or laughing at it—which extends the ægis of its protection over their swelling hoards. Why is this? We do not profess to understand on what principle of economy or financial engineering, the exemption of the wealthiest classes of the community from contributing fairly towards the maintenance of good Government, by which, as we have said, they exist, and the improvement of the country on which their wealth depends, can be continued or defended. It seems an anomaly that any journalist should have to point the attention of a Finance Minister to an immense mass of wealth so devoutly consecrated to its owners' uses that Government, at least as it was represented by Sir Charles Trevelyan, appears to tremble at the thought of sacrilegiously laying an impost upon it, while the country, even with underpaid services, and with public works undone, is tottering on the brink of everlasting deficits. The question of all questions for Mr. Massey is this, How is that wealth to be legitimately and equitably taxed in order that simple justice may be done to the oppressed officers of Government in the first instance, and material improvement urged on, in the second?

There are two taxes to which Mr. Massey can resort, each equitable and lucrative—an income tax and a tax on succession to property. The fastidious and mistaken faith under which Sir Charles Trevelyan hedged his hatred of the income tax, that Government had bound itself to repeal the tax at the end of five years has been indulged at an immense cost to the country; but being indulged, the most bitter opponents of the tax ought to be satisfied with Government for keeping its supposed promise, and with the results of the year's experiment, which prove its necessity. There is little likelihood of a surplus, and it is doubtful, whether, notwithstanding the high prices of opium, there will even be an equilibrium at the end of the present financial year; but if either surplus or an equilibrium were to exist, it would imply nothing, as the progress of public works has been in a great measure suspended, that a diminished revenue arising from a repudiated budget may be balanced by a diminished expenditure. Mr. Massey is foreclosed by the fate which Sir Charles Trevelyan's scheme of taxation met at the hands of Sir Charles Wood, from treading in the footsteps of his predecessor. Indian taxation must run parallel in its principles with English, and the taxation of the poor must not be increased, nor rising industries crushed by imposts, that rich traders may remain untaxed. On the contrary, as the tendency of English taxation is to exempt the poorer classes altogether, or to reduce their share of the burden of taxation to a minimum, it would still be Mr. Massey's duty, even were the regular revenue far in excess of expenditure, to transfer a portion of the taxes now pressing upon the very poorest to the shoulders of the millionaires of the Presidency towns. The wretched labourer, who has nothing to lose by the most radical overturning of our present social arrangements, contributes as much for security to life, limb, and the little pittance he earns, as a wealthy shroff, a millionaire cotton broker, or a firm that has extended should exist among all its members, and this, the General's recent visit, will, it is to be hoped, effect.

Major Keatinge, V. C., Political Agent in Kattyawar, has returned from the districts, and is, I believe, at present engaged in giving effect to certain arrangements sanctioned by the Government of India for introducing better order and system in the management of the province. This done, arrangements will be made for the annual exhibition of agricultural implements, &c., which I hear will take place some time next month. None of the machinery have as yet come in, but they are on the way. Whether trained engineers to work the machinery will come or not, is unknown, but as there is a certain individual here, whose forte appears to be in the agricultural and bull-shooting line, this cannot be of much consequence, as I feel sanguine of success, if he undertake the exhibition, whether of himself, or the machinery, matters but little.

People say that when the cat is out the mice begin to play, so owing to Major Keatinge's absence from the districts, the Waghers are enjoying holidays.

One of the notabilities of this province, Saudjee Amerchund, leaves for the sacred Benares in a day or two, on a soul-purifying mission, as a general impression has gone abroad among the Nagur population, that the waters of the Goomptee have lost their sacred properties, and that nothing short of ablutions in the holy "Ganga," can effect a thorough absolution.

PESHAWUR, 20TH JANUARY.

On the 10th of January Mahomed Ibraheem Khan received a report from the Governor of Jellalabad that Mahomed Uslum Khan and others had collected 2,000 men and were within 6 koss of Jellalabad. Ibraheem Khan ordered a force of 4 Regiments of Infantry, a Battery of Artillery, and 2,000 Horse to be prepared to march under Futteh Mahomed Khan; but the troops objected to march without receiving their arrears of pay for three months, and the march was postponed until the arrival of Abdool Ruzak, the minister of finance. He was expected to arrive in three days. Futteh Mahomed was anxious to go, as he hoped, to further his own views; by so doing Wuzeer Mahomed Khan's property, that was confiscated, has been restored to him. The Toorkistan army marched to Deh Zumma on their way to Chareekar. Shahdowla Khan returned to Bagh Shah with copies of the new treaties. Mahomed Azim Khan is in hopes that Mahomed Ibraheem Khan will send men to the assistance of the Governor of Jellalabad, and he will then take advantage of the weakness of the Cabul army to make an attack on the city. The Toorkistan troops have seized Killa Hajee, a place on the road from Chareekar to Cabul and about 8 miles from the city. There is excitement at Jellalabad and all the valuable property has been concealed in neighbouring villages. It is doubtful whether the peace will last. Little however can be done on either side on account of the quantity of snow that has fallen.

The force that left Peshawur under the Command of Brigadier General Durand is now on its return. Some of the Oothmankhail villages were destroyed on Friday, the villagers themselves assisting in their destruction. The heads of one village came to Colonel Becher at Murdan, before the force marched. The Khans of Pullo, beyond our border, who it was supposed would assist the Oothmankhail, came in to the Commissioner. Some of the headmen of the Oothmankhail villages are in confinement. The object of the expedition was to punish that tribe and to make them throw down their villages and re-establish them in the plains. This has been accomplished without firing a shot. The successful results of this expedition may be attributed to the presence of a large force, and the confidence inspired amongst the tribes of Swat, Bonair, &c. by Colonel Becher's previous treatment of them. The Frontier is quite quiet.

24TH JANUARY.

Mahomed Ibraheem and the whole of the Cabul army marched from Bagh Shah to the Bala Hissar on the 12th. Several serais have been assigned for the accommodation of the troops. Mahomed Ibraheem Khan and his adviser Hafzjee have written to the Ameer requesting him to come to Cabul, or to send them some definite instructions if he has any wish to retain the throne. On the arrival of the Mustaffee Abdool Ruzak Khan on the 18th January, Futteh Mahomed Khan was directed to march to Jellalabad with a force of 4 Regiments of Infantry, 8 guns and 200 Cavalry. Arrangements were being made to pay the troops their arrears. Futteh Mahomed Khan and Mahomed Shureef are said to be conspiring together, and the former is pleased at the idea of being sent to Jellalabad as he will, he hopes, be able to carry out his plans. Mahomed Azim is encamped at Agha Serai about 15 miles from Cabul and is spending money freely in the hope of winning the Cabul troops to his side. He is said to be in constant correspondence with Bokhara; and although formerly one of the few Affghans who spoke well of the English he is now loud in crying them down. Kaffirs will leave Cabul with Futteh Mahomed Khan's force. A Kaffila has left Peshawur, so the road may be considered open to Jellalabad. The border tribes are quite quiet.—Friend of India, February 1.

DELHI, 27TH JANUARY.

SINCE my last there has been a change in the weather; rain has fallen in great abundance, and last night there was a good deal of vivid lightning and loud thunder; and, judging from the heavy clouds still lowering, I should say that more rain was at hand, so we ought to get fine clear weather, as well as a longer lease of cold, after it.

Major General F. Wheler, C.B., Commanding the Division, is expected to-morrow or Monday to inspect the 25th P. I., after which, I suppose, he proceeds to Agra.

The inspection of the Armstrong Battery, which was to have come off on Friday, was postponed in consequence of the guns requiring a little more time to complete them; some day next week is mentioned as the time for inspecting them, and the Battery willhave a warm march, unless they get off soon.

The 15th Punjab Infantry was delayed on account of the inclement weather, and is, I believe, still here; they will also have a warm march, and bad roads for some distance, as the Grand Trunk road is very "sloppy," and all the Station roads so well soaked that they are scarcely passable. It is a pity something cannot be done to prevent the injury effected by heavily-laden carts; somehow or other our roads are always under repair, and, with one or two exceptions, never get out of order, nor will they be so until some stringent measures are adopted in regard to these nuisances. It is quite distressing to all but those interested in the expenditure of funds, to see the way in which new roads are cut up by carts heavily laden with stones, and no warnings to the drivers or their employers have any better effect than they would if addressed respectfully into the ears or horns of the ruminating bullocks that drag them, unless to render the nuisance more prevalent.

The inconvenience of throwing open the Queen's Gardens to all classes are already showing. On Thursday evening last, while the Band was playing, a carriage driven by a native gentleman and full of his bhaie-bunds, entered the select circle, and, as a matter of course, blocked up the road to the great inconvenience of fair equestrians and their cavaliers, who were brought to a dead stand-still in consequence. Unfortunately, the Commissioner is in the district, and the Deputy Commissioner does not often honour the Band Stand with his presence, or something might have been done to mitigate the nuisance; for unless those who advocated the measure of admitting all classes are convinced by ocular demonstration, they will not be easily persuaded of the extent people can be annoyed by it. But if the nuisance increases as it has commenced, it will soon be found necessary to remove the Band to the Stand outside the city, and give up the Gardens to the native population. It is all very fine to sneer at "exclusiveness," and advocate the intermingling of all classes; it looks very nice on paper; but unless the advocates first apprehend to teach Asiatics common decency and politeness, and give their friends some idea of the right and wrong side of the road, their efforts will be practically of no avail, or, still worse, productive of mischief. The "smoke-dried" inhabitants of the city have no more to complain about than they had when their puppet-king kept his harem in the centre, and family; besides, the inhabitants of Delhi are not only accustomed to being "smoke-dried" but they much prefer that state to the great annoyance of their European neighbours. I speak or write, from sad experience, and invite any unbiassed person to satisfy himself of the truth, by passing an hour in the city in the evening, or by walking outside any morning. If he is not suffocated by the first, he will, by trying the second, see one of the "smoke-dried" native gentlemen taking an airing! in a closed palanquin carriage, hermetically sealed against wind and weather, and evidently enjoying that state of personal steam which in the cold weather is so congenial to natives generally, and so much in accordance with their ideas of comfort. To pity such people as "smoke-dried" against their will is simply displaying ignorance of the native character.

Another subject I may mention in connection with the nuisances of Delhi. I allude to the unearthly yells sent forth by persons on every third or fourth house-top for the purpose of scaring pigeons. No wonder the unfortunate birds fly up and endeavour to escape from the noise by joining some rival flock, but they no sooner alight than they are frightened out of their feathers by some opposition pigeon-flyer. This system of gambling—to call it by no stronger name—is indulged in almost universally by the Mahomedan riff-raff of Delhi, and the screams, yells, shouts, and unearthly noises these gamblers succeed in producing, would do honour to another mutiny and rebellion. The native citizens of Delhi seem to delight in dirt, smoke and noise, it would therefore be hard to endeavour to improve matters, but I cannot help wishing that their nuisances were confined to the "Sudder" outside the city, for unfortunately, there is not sufficient accommodation for Europeans out of ear-shot of all I complain of.

The termination of the war on the North-West Frontier before it commenced must be considered fortunate; but, unfortunately, there are people in these parts who do not believe implicitly in it as they obstinately persist in thinking that the thing is "patched up," and may, before many weeks are over, break out in a fresh place. If the force has really left their mark upon the villages deserving of such attention, well and good; it may have beneficial effect for a time; but if the work has only been half done, and the lawless tribes, only irritated, they will not forget it, whenever opportunity offers for retaliation. But we have the Government telegram to assure us that "all's serene," so it will not do to kick against it.

The Metcalf Estates at Delhi and the Cootab are shortly to be put up to auction. The property in Delhi is well known, it is very extensive, and would furnish a number of good sites for building. The remains of the family mansion and adjoining bungalows (formerly used as a billiard-room) are still standing, and inhabited. If such a class as that termed speculators, still exists in India, this will be a rare opportunity for them, but I fear the upset price may deter some from coming forward. There are several other sites for sale in Delhi, and everybody knows that houses for Europeans are much required outside the city, but natives seem to shirk the building of such, and consequently there is not appearance of another human being, and he probably tells his family—that is, if he has one and can speak articulately, which I much doubt—that he met a "Djin" or Evil Spirit on the hill side, for he cannot believe that any other human beings in the world besides himself are so miserable as to be obliged to live at Delhi. I do not believe that, in the whole world, there can be found any place which, for unredeemed wretchedness, ugliness and desolation, can equal the country surrounding us on every side. Picture to yourself, Jack, with your artistic imagination, a land where the fields produced nothing more verdant than slate and flint, stones interspersed with the bones of men and animals; fill up your foreground with rolling sand hillocks of a light tawny hue; take as a back ground a ridge of stunted, uniform, black hills; remember that not a tree or shrub, not a man or beast, not a village or single hut is to be seen; wash in a dirty haze compounded of dust and fog; take a sky of that murky stone colour which is generally supposed in England to be premonitory of severe frost; draw your sketch thus, and you will have a faint idea of the charming spot from which I now address you.

Perhaps, if we had plenty of good society here it would counterbalance the natural horrors of the place, for I think that Pandemonium itself would not be such a very disagreeable "digging" if it were inhabited by a lot of jovial, good natured, sociable fellows—male and female. But at Nowshera (which ought to be re-christened with Barrackpore for a godfather) our society is limited to ourselves—that is, to the one regiment enduring its year of purgatory—and as a consequence, social gatherings and the free communion of mind with mind are not to be met with, since, in a single regiment, every one is too reticent for any chance of a frank interchange of thought and opinion, and too bored with the monotony of mess to care for meeting his brother officers only at any other species of congregational enjoyment. Certainly there is a married clergyman living somewhere in the lines, but we never see him excepting at church on Sundays, and as he then has all the conversation to himself there is no chance of our ideas being furbished up by the necessary friction of an argument with a new opponent. So I verily expect that our minds will become of a vegetable nature shortly (the only green things in these parts,) and I much doubt whether in a year's time we shall have a sufficient knowledge of Her Majesty's English for articulate speech, although our bodily powers will have increased in an adverse ratio, owing to our constant prowling about on the search for something to do. Perhaps we may forget our friends, our language, our dear old country; perhaps the remembrance of the delights of that last year in London may fade from my memory; perhaps those breakfasts at Limmer's, those dinners at Long's, those little comical parties at the Café Blanchard, and oh, fie! those jolly suppers at Cremorne, may be veiled in oblivion; perhaps, even, I may lose my fine natural thirst, forsake olives and pate de foie gras, avoid dry champagne, and addict myself to beef and beer. Who knows what may happen at such a place as this, where one seems to be out of the glorious world altogether, cut off from all society, all amusements, all that gives life its freshness and savour? May be that I shall become accustomed to it in time, for I once was six months on board ship, returning from India, with seventeen children under the age of five, three spinsters who had failed in getting husbands, a military man with a grievance, and thirteen native ayahs who were always sea-sick; yet, I assure, you that, at the end of the voyage, I was sorry to leave the lot. Be that as it may, there is no doubt that Nowshera is peculiarly objectionable to a new-comer, however delightful to a resident, and I therefore pray the gods that I may be speedily delivered from this atrocious limbo.

There is a chance of a short escape from review just at present, owing to a row in the Eusufzaie country, whether a large force marched the day before yesterday, comprising amongst its details a portion of my regiment, and the remaining moiety is to follow if the enemy makes any serious resistance. I don't presume I am for one moment that I am burning with ardour and enthusiasm to be in the midst of the fray, for between you and me, Jack, I think that there is just as much glory to be gained by sitting at my own fireside as by climbing a hill, knocking down a village, and going to sleep on its ruins; but however, the monotony, hunting or affectation of bloodthirstiness, I honestly do wish that the enemy would fight like Kilkenny cats, so that I might escape from the terible monotony and boredom of life at Nowshera. To Messieurs les Yusoofzaiens, les Swatees, les Momunds et les Afreedees, I sincerely and heartily wish you an infinite power to your elbows, for I'd sooner fight the whole of you single-handed than combat the legions of blue devils who are the only inhabitants of Nowshera since the force went out. Just fancy, Jack, the exceeding barbarity of our dear old General; he has taken away with him all our whist players, so that I am reduced to the cheerful game of preference dumby until the conquering heroes return! How wrong it is to expose the lives of men who understand the science of whist, thoroughly to the knives and matchlocks of savages who never heard of "Cavendish"—no not even as the name of a species of tobacco!

I am now off to Musketry, that delightful pastime, so good bye for the present

From thine ever,
TOM TORTHORWOLD.

P. S.—On looking over my letter, and seeing mention made of pate de foie gras, I am reminded of something so exquisitely rich, that I must insert it, contra bonos mores, in our descriptive. A facetious correspondent of one of our newspapers—and one of the best too—actually informed its readers that the truffles were made by cramming geese with food in front of a hot fire! By Jove, I always thought, until read this veracious yarn, that truffles were a vegetable and not an animal production—a mere root, in fact—as botany learns you see. Just imagine my living so long without knowing that pate de foie gras was made of truffles! Why, I actually believed its contents to be goose livers, with a sprinkling of truffles purées to give it zest.—Pioneer, February 2.

LETTERS FROM NOWSHERA.

FROM CAPTAIN TORTHORWOLD TO HIS BROTHER IN ENGLAND.

NOWSHERA, 17TH JANUARY.

DEAR JACK,—Having successfully passed through the hardships and dangers of a march from Peshawur to this place, and being now comfortably settled in my new quarters, I take up my pen to give you a description of the station which is honoured by the presence of your amiable brother, so that you may be enabled to feel that he is still in the land of the living.

Probably, when you see the heading of this letter, you will order Mary, or Jane, or Anne, or whatever the domestic who have charge of my present hour, to fetch you that terribly bulky Atlas which in days of yore, when we were boys together, was regarded by us as a hateful enemy, and after turning to the Map of Bengal you will in vain endeavour to put your finger on Nowshera. So in order to save your eyes such fruitless toil, I will give you a clue to my whereabouts, by telling you that Nowshera is situated between Peshawur and Attock, at about twenty-five miles distance from either place, and in the centre of the Peshawur Valley, that charming locality where all those who survive the fevers and sun-strokes of the summer month are murdered by assassins during the winter time. You cannot say that the first appearance of this station is at all likely to prepossess a stranger in its favour, for my own thoughts on entering it were that during the whole course of my Indian experience I had never (chanced upon such a hideous spot, excepting perhaps Sukkur on the Indus, which I have always looked upon as the gate of Hades itself. The first building you see on approaching Nowshera from the Peshawur side are the Barracks, nor will you perceive any other remarkable object within its precincts whether you come from the North or the South from the East or the West, since the place is all one dead level, beginning to end—Barracks, Barracks, Barracks, et præterea nihil. The these edifices are useful, I grant unhesitatingly, but that they are ornamental, doubt much, for who can see any beauty of contour in their straight lines, square windows, and squat verandah pillars; or what mortal so devoid of artistic taste as to rejoice in sandy coloured walls supporting salmon tinted roofs? To my mind, they are the facsimiles of that ugliest of all earthly buildings, the Marylebone Workhouse minus the soot an dirt which serve to tone down its obtrusive hideousness, with a soupcon of antiquity a redeeming quality not possessed by the glaring bricks and glaring paint which make a walk through Nowshera about as trying to the eyes as a long stare at a magnesium light. There is not a single blade of grass to be seen in the place, not a tree or shrub, not a plant of any sort, not a single atom of verdure, but all is bald and naked as a clean picked skull, hard and dry as the statistics of a Peace Society meeting. At present the sun rarely shines forth at all, and when it does, its rays are about as powerful as Sir Charles Wood's speeches; but in the summer month's the glare, heat, and dust must be something very terrible, since the whole station is surrounded by sand-hills and every wind of heaven must necessarily bring with it clouds of stifling grit and blinding dust right into our midst, as there is no kind of obstacle to the progress of these simooms.

A short distance from the Barracks flows the Cabul River, a heavy, muddy stream, of no use to any one, its current being too strong to admit of rowing on its filthy waters, whilst its treacherous under-currents prevent all attempts at swimming. But if it has no virtues, it decidedly has very vicious instincts, for, occasionally, it rises suddenly, without giving a moment's warning, and then the inhabitants have to betake themselves to the adjacent hills, as happened some few years since when the regiment quartered here was very nearly being floated down to Attock, and only saved itself by a precipitate flight in its night-gown. Any one who did not know Nowshera would suppose that the proximity of the river would insure a certain amount of sport in the way of wild-fowl shooting, and so thought I, until a week's hard work convinced me that the ducks which were reported to be numerous in the surrounding Shikarees as being only a few miles away, were veritable canards living in Nubibus. Indeed, the whole region hereabouts is destitute of animals, (excepting a peculiar race of light-coloured rats, which abounds plentifully,) and as for game, I don't believe that a single head has ever been shot within the memory of man, woman or child, the natives—although that certainly is not a very long time, since people don't live to a good old age at Nowshera. If you go for a walk into the desolate-looking country, you meet no living creature, man or beast, bird or bat, excepting, perchance, a lean vulture trying to make a meal off a dead rat that has died of starvation or a stray puppy pucka sitting on the top of a hill, browsing on the flint stones which cover the surface of the ground. If by any chance you happen to light upon one of the aborigines of the district—he is generally a gaunt creature of ferocious aspect, dressed in rags and nakedness—he rushes away into the hills, whether he be obliged to live on the carcass of another human being, and he probably tells his family—that is, if he has one and can speak articulately, which I much doubt—that he met a "Djin" or Evil Spirit on the hill side, for he cannot believe that any other human beings in the world besides himself are so miserable as to be obliged to live at Nowshera. I do not believe that, in the whole world, there can be found any place which, for unredeemed wretchedness, ugliness and desolation, can equal the country surrounding us on every side. Picture to yourself, Jack, with your artistic imagination, a land where the fields produced nothing more verdant than slate and flint, stones interspersed with the bones of men and animals; fill up your foreground with rolling sand hillocks of a light tawny hue; take as a back ground a ridge of stunted, uniform, black hills; remember that not a tree or shrub, not a man or beast, not a village or single hut is to be seen; wash in a dirty haze compounded of dust and fog; take a sky of that murky stone colour which is generally supposed in England to be premonitory of severe frost; draw your sketch thus, and you will have a faint idea of the charming spot from which I now address you.

Perhaps, if we had plenty of good society here it would counterbalance the natural horrors of the place, for I think that Pandemonium itself would not be such a very disagreeable "digging" if it were inhabited by a lot of jovial, good natured, sociable fellows—male and female. But at Nowshera (which ought to be re-christened with Barrackpore for a godfather) our society is limited to ourselves—that is, to the one regiment enduring its year of purgatory—and as a consequence, social gatherings and the free communion of mind with mind are not to be met with, since, in a single regiment, every one is too reticent for any chance of a frank interchange of thought and opinion, and too bored with the monotony of mess to care for meeting his brother officers only at any other species of congregational enjoyment. Certainly there is a married clergyman living somewhere in the lines, but we never see him excepting at church on Sundays, and as he then has all the conversation to himself there is no chance of our ideas being furbished up by the necessary friction of an argument with a new opponent. So I verily expect that our minds will become of a vegetable nature shortly (the only green things in these parts,) and I much doubt whether in a year's time we shall have a sufficient knowledge of Her Majesty's English for articulate speech, although our bodily powers will have increased in an adverse ratio, owing to our constant prowling about on the search for something to do. Perhaps we may forget our friends, our language, our dear old country; perhaps the remembrance of the delights of that last year in London may fade from my memory; perhaps those breakfasts at Limmer's, those dinners at Long's, those little comical parties at the Café Blanchard, and oh, fie! those jolly suppers at Cremorne, may be veiled in oblivion; perhaps, even, I may lose my fine natural thirst, forsake olives and pate de foie gras, avoid dry champagne, and addict myself to beef and beer. Who knows what may happen at such a place as this, where one seems to be out of the glorious world altogether, cut off from all society, all amusements, all that gives life its freshness and savour? May be that I shall become accustomed to it in time, for I once was six months on board ship, returning from India, with seventeen children under the age of five, three spinsters who had failed in getting husbands, a military man with a grievance, and thirteen native ayahs who were always sea-sick; yet, I assure, you that, at the end of the voyage, I was sorry to leave the lot. Be that as it may, there is no doubt that Nowshera is peculiarly objectionable to a new-comer, however delightful to a resident, and I therefore pray the gods that I may be speedily delivered from this atrocious limbo.

There is a chance of a short escape from review just at present, owing to a row in the Eusufzaie country, whether a large force marched the day before yesterday, comprising amongst its details a portion of my regiment, and the remaining moiety is to follow if the enemy makes any serious resistance. I don't presume I am for one moment that I am burning with ardour and enthusiasm to be in the midst of the fray, for between you and me, Jack, I think that there is just as much glory to be gained by sitting at my own fireside as by climbing a hill, knocking down a village, and going to sleep on its ruins; but however, the monotony, hunting or affectation of bloodthirstiness, I honestly do wish that the enemy would fight like Kilkenny cats, so that I might escape from the terible monotony and boredom of life at Nowshera. To Messieurs les Yusoofzaiens, les Swatees, les Momunds et les Afreedees, I sincerely and heartily wish you an infinite power to your elbows, for I'd sooner fight the whole of you single-handed than combat the legions of blue devils who are the only inhabitants of Nowshera since the force went out. Just fancy, Jack, the exceeding barbarity of our dear old General; he has taken away with him all our whist players, so that I am reduced to the cheerful game of preference dumby until the conquering heroes return! How wrong it is to expose the lives of men who understand the science of whist, thoroughly to the knives and matchlocks of savages who never heard of "Cavendish"—no not even as the name of a species of tobacco!

I am now off to Musketry, that delightful pastime, so good bye for the present

From thine ever,
TOM TORTHORWOLD.

P. S.—On looking over my letter, and seeing mention made of pate de foie gras, I am reminded of something so exquisitely rich, that I must insert it, contra bonos mores, in our descriptive. A facetious correspondent of one of our newspapers—and one of the best too—actually informed its readers that the truffles were made by cramming geese with food in front of a hot fire! By Jove, I always thought, until read this veracious yarn, that truffles were a vegetable and not an animal production—a mere root, in fact—as botany learns you see. Just imagine my living so long without knowing that pate de foie gras was made of truffles! Why, I actually believed its contents to be goose livers, with a sprinkling of truffles purées to give it zest.—Pioneer, February 2.

POONA.

WE understand that the fee for pupils at the Poona High School has been increased from one rupee to two rupees, to take place from the present month.—Observer, February 6.

A CONSIDERABLE change has taken place in the weather for the last few days. On Sunday morning last the weather was far different to the proceeding day, it being ushered in by dark louring clouds, which by eight o'clock in the morning resulted in a cold miserable drizzling rain, which kept up for several hours, rendering the atmosphere to a considerable extent; by one o'clock the power of the sun asserted its supremacy and triumphed over every obstacle, and remained supreme for the whole of the day; thus proving the truth of the old maxim that "many a cloudy morning turns out a fine day." Yesterday morning at an early hour it was remarkably cold, but pleasant withal, a fine keen bracing air, but the sun appeared with her usual resplendent beauty and gradually brought warmth as she made her progress upwards.—Id.

A CLUB FOR KURRACHEE.—The desirability of having in all the large stations in India well established clubs where single men and grass widowers can be comfortably housed and fed, would now appear to have become a recognized necessity, and already in not only the Presidency towns but in many large stations this want has to some extent been supplied with success. In Kurrachee, however, nothing has yet been done towards establishing what many must, we think, consider to be a great desideratum, that is to say, a club where not alone new comers from the up-country or from seaward can be properly accommodated, but many of the residents of this station also, who must, we should say, in these hard times find this cost of separate establishment to be a very expensive item. Setting aside the inconvenience and misery of living alone, which in our opinion in this country not unfrequently predisposes to disease, the difficulty of procuring good servants, and the absence of a price-current whereby some notion of the cost of the necessaries of life is obtainable, make the burden of keeping up an establishment almost unbearable, and no doubt many persons, both civil and military, would be rejoiced to have the opportunity of joining a club which would rid them of a trouble that all now more than ever must heartily hate and detest. We should think that a club conducted upon the same principles as those at present existing in Bombay, and in Poona too, we believe, would turn out to be a profitable speculation in itself, and be at the same time well appreciated by those whom business or duty might bring down from the Punjab and other parts of Northern India to Kurrachee. At present there is here but one hotel, the Adelphi, where people only any respectability can stay during their temporary sojourn in Kurrachee, but this which we know to be well conducted, is not sufficient for the growing requirements of the place. Something more extensive is wanted which, while large enough to accommodate all travellers passing through Kurrachee, shall at the same time be sufficiently commodious to board and lodge, such of its own residents as may desire to do away at one and the same time with the costliness of a separate establishment and the evil of subjecting oneself to the extortion and exorbitant charges of native servants. We should even like to see in this station a monster hotel that would in this respect equally serve the purposes of such of the married portion of society as desired to rid themselves of the evils we have here mentioned, and were a well-directed Company formed to carry out such a scheme, and erect a suitable building for the purpose in a good locality, such for instance as that part of Camp situate between the Commissioner's compound, and the Artillery Lines, we should not be at all surprised to find it pay well and return in time a good dividend. We commend this matter as a profitable undertaking, to the serious attention of all capitalists.—Our Paper, February 2.

MADRAS.

WE understand that Messrs. Binny and Co., charged Government Rs. 6,300-10-4 for employing the steamer Busheer in the late search after the Devonport Troop Ship, after the recent gale. The cost includes coal and trip to Trinconamalee. —Times, February 2.

WE observe that H. M.'s 2nd Battalion 10th Regiment of Foot is brought on the establishment of the Presidency from the 17th of January 1865, the date on which the last detachment of the regiment arrived in Calcutta.—Bangalore Herald, February 3.

VERY few people outside the little world of Bangalore, are aware that besides the many advantages we possess in this favoured table land that of drinking our own beer is not one of the least. Bangalore has its own Brewery and although perhaps we may be accused of a little puffing, we are bound to say, that the beer turned out is capital stuff. We have now before us, a pamphlet of testimonials all praising highly the Mysore Brewery beer and porter. The testimonials of these give great promise of the budding literary talent of Bangalore. Some are short, others long. One gentleman with charming simplicity says:—My wife has used this Porter for the last two years, and has derived such benefit from it, as to be able to nurse her last two babes herself; and she attributes this benefit to the blessing of God, and the use of Mr. Merton's porter. Another says he does not wish for better beer or porter. And so on through a long list. All this of course speaks well for the beer, and we hope Mr. Merton's Brewery will soon be known and appreciated not only in Bangalore but throughout India.—Id.

BHOOTAN.

We have been favoured with the following from Camp Dewangiri, dated January 23rd:—

Pending the result of the last, and it is to be hoped, the final Mission to Tongso Penlow, the only sign of activity in the Camp during the last week has been the proceedings of a Committee directed to examine the site of the hill above Meeroo, in regard to its fitness for a cantonment. The height proved to be something above 5,000 feet; an altitude sufficient to insure the safety of troops stationed on it against the malarious influences of the grass advancing from the plains, certainly not possessed by this ridge, which is barely 1500 ft. above the plains, ought alone to weigh down the drawback of the labor which will be necessary to open out the new site, which is the only valid one that can be urged. The difference in the air and climate of the two position is most marked, the thermometer at noon in the shade of the woods at Meeroo being 48° and here at 60°, a difference which in May would tell considerably in favor of the former place. Water appeared to be sufficiently abundant, and to test the supply, measures have been taken to drain a little sheet of water, perhaps 200 ft. long by 100 ft. broad, which lies to the North-West of the site, and conveniently accessible. If this prove to be supplied by springs, which appears probable, three will be no danger of a want of water.

The people in the village must now be tolerably familiar with the apperance of the invaders of their country. On the ground that "familiarity breeds contempt," it may be explicable that, on the last occasion of an interview between some of us and the Llama of Meeroo, that distinguished Bhootea was excessively drunk, and when drunk these people assume a maudlin intrusiveness, which is particularly objectionable. Dirt is the most showy characteristic of all hill people, but a Kumaon coolie, or even a Lepcha of Sikhim, would be as driven snow compared with your Bhootea. Their lips gleam with the moist vermillion of the pan leaf, which they are ever chewing; the blankets which they huddle on their persons have their original discoloured colors rendered a purplish brown, and the worst possible position in which one can stand to one of them is—to stand to leeward of him. Doubtless they have virtues,—good humour amongst them, certainly; but altogether their society is not agreeable to people at all prejudiced against the odour of a pigstye, or the habits of its tenants. In point of feature, many of them are very like the Chinese, with whom they appear to have some communication; for at Meeroo are some Chinese printing-blocks; and the silk scarves, &c., brought in as presents are of unmistakeable Chinese designs and manufacture—of inferior quality however.

The Committee reported lastly, that the coolie corps was to be broken up. The present in decision renders this doubtful, as they are the most valuable form of carriage we possess.

Within a week or ten days some definite course of action must be adopted, but what that will prove depends on more wills than one. Silver may not be well stocked, as the old and exceedingly vulgar adage about "Fine words" is too true, to render it likely that we can dispense with one or other of those metals; and there is every reason to believe, that the latter will eventually be chosen to decide a dispute, disreputable alike in its commencement, and, hitherto, in every stage of its progress.—Englishman, February 1.

NORTH-WEST PROVINCES.

SURGEON-MAJOR C. B. CHALMERS is, we are informed, to be appointed Officiating Deputy Inspector-General of Hospitals in room of Dr. Wilkie.—Pioneer, February 2.

CENTRAL INDIA.

WE regret to hear that ill health has compelled Captain Puckle, Executive Engineer, Kamptee, to relinquish his duties and proceed at once to England.—Times, February 3.

THE Government have resolved upon the immediate reduction of the garrison at Kamptee. Its present strength is to be decreased by half a regiment of cavalry, and one battery of Artillery. More extensive reductions are sure to follow on the completion of the railway to Nagpore.—Id.

CAPTAIN MEAD has entered on his arduous duties, as Superintendent of Works, Central Provinces, and with a Chief Engineer of Colonel Maxwell's abilities at the helm we may expect to hear no more of the wastefulness and blundering which once disgraced the department.—Id.

THE horses employed in carrying the Mails between Nagpore and Wurdah, must be a sorry lot, for they are constantly breaking down and the wonder of it is that when the horses are disabled and knocked up, they are replaced by bullocks. It provokes laughter to see an important express for the Viceroy travelling at the rate of two miles an hour.—Id.

BENGAL.

WE are informed that Colonel Fraser has been directed by the Home Government to draw up such detailed instructions as will enable the engineers of Bengal to carry out their proposed experiments to be made at the mouth of the Hoogly, with a view to the substitution of a screw-pile lighthouse for floating lights.—Englishman, February 1.

ON the question of a higher rate of duty on salt, in that portion of the Madras Presidency, lying between the Bengal Frontier and the river Godavery, the Lieutenant Governor of Bengal has expressed his agreement with the Board of Revenue in considering, that no good reason has been assigned why the population of Ganjam should pay a less duty for the salt they use than the inhabitants of the Pooree district.—Harkaru, February 1.

CALCUTTA SMALL CAUSE COURT,—

JANUARY 30, 1866.

(BEFORE C. BOULNOIS, ESQ.)

WAGES AND DAMAGES IN LIEU OF PASSAGE MONEY.—P. G. Pollard vs. William Coish was an action brought by the plaintiff for the recovery of Rs. 593, under a special agreement in writing. Mr. Gasper appeared for the plaintiff, and Mr. Arrakiel appeared for the defendant. The facts of the plaintiff's case, as opened by Mr. Gasper, were as follows:—The plaintiff was the master shoemaker of Her Majesty's 44th Regiment. Mr. Coish wrote to him to the effect that, if he were willing to come and serve in his shop in Calcutta, he would pay for his discharge and give him a binding agreement for three years certain. For the first year his salary was to be Rs. 100 per month, for the second year Rs. 110 per month, and for the third year Rs. 120 per month. Mr. Coish further stipulated that in case the plaintiff became dissatisfied with the service and wished to leave, he was bound to give one month's notice before so doing, and also to return to him whatever amount he (Mr. Coish) paid for his discharge from the military service. But, on the other head, if Mr. Coish became dissatisfied with Pollard, and wished him no longer to continue in his business, then in that case Mr. Coish bound himself to find the plaintiff either a second or a third class passage to England, and pay him his wages up to the time of his leaving the country, except in the case of drunkenness, when Mr. Coish reserved to himself the right to dismiss him summarily, without passage-money or bounty. To this arrangement, which was reduced into writing, the plaintiff had no objection, and thereupon applied for his discharge, which he obtained in due course, Mr. Coish paying Rs. 15 for the same. Some time in the early part of the year 1865, the plaintiff joined his appointment, and continued in it up till December, when he was discharged by Mr. Coish without any cause, except that he was dissatisfied with plaintiff's work in the shop. The first expression of dissatisfaction on the part of Mr. Coish was made by him a few days after his return from Rangoon in September 1865, up to which time plaintiff's work was considered so satisfactory that the firm was left in his charge during Mr. Coish's absence from Calcutta. From September, up to the time of plaintiff's dismissal, there was much dissatisfaction on both sides, and continued complaints on the part of Coish of bad cutting executed by the plaintiff. Being discharged from the service of Mr. Coish, the plaintiff in this present action, under terms of the written agreement, sued to recover—first, the sum of Rs. 43, being the balance of wages due for the last days of December, the discharge having taken place on the 22nd December; secondly, for the sum of Rs. 110, wages for January, and Rs. 50 for 15 days of February, being the date of on which a passage was procurable to England, the plaintiff being entitled to pay the same under the agreement of the effect—"I agree to pay your wages up to the date of sailing;" and thirdly, for the sum of Rs. 490, being the amount of second-class passage-money, the defendant having failed to provide him with a passage to England, as he agreed to do under the agreement, in which case he would have been at liberty to procure a "second or a third class" passage to England—these three items aggregating to Rs. 593, the amount which the plaintiff sought to recover.

The defence raised on behalf of Mr. Coish, by Mr. Arrakiel, was "not liable." The agreement, in the first place, was very ambiguous, and it was for the Court to put what construction it thought fit upon it. Mr. Coish having obtained the plaintiff a discharge from his regiment, placed him in his shop on the salary agreed upon, Rs. 100; but shortly after, for the plaintiff's convenience, it was arranged that the plaintiff should reside on the premises, giving a deduction of Rs. 30 only from his salary for board and lodging. Both plaintiff and defendant were satisfied with the existing relations between themselves, and, while this state of things continued, Mr. Coish left Calcutta for Rangoon, leaving the plaintiff in a responsible position in the firm. In September last year Mr. Coish returned from Rangoon, and almost immediately afterwards discovered something wrong in the plaintiff's conduct. He appealed subtly, perfectly dumb, when asked any questions by Mr. Coish, and on the whole appeared very dissatisfied with his position. Mr. Coish, however, got him to speak out at last, and then the plaintiff told him that he considered himself insulted, and, when asked how he was insulted, and by whom, plaintiff replied he considered himself insulted by a clerk being placed above him and by Mrs. Coish making over all the dak letters received by the firm to the circar, without any reference to him. The plaintiff added that he was so much disgusted with his situation, that if he had the money to repay what Coish had paid for his discharge, he would directly leave him. On this Mr. Coish told the plaintiff that he would be very sorry to keep a dissatisfied servant in his employ, and that he would rather forgive him the amount he had paid for his discharge than keep a dissatisfied servant in his service. Plaintiff repeated that if he had the money he would leave instantly, and, upon Coish offering to forgive him the amount of discharge money, he said either "you (meaning Coish) shall" or "you must," send me home. Ever since his return from Rangoon, he found cause to complain of the plaintiff's work. The cutting was very bad, so that many pairs of boots, large enough in the body of the foot, could not be worn on account of the extreme tightness at the ankle. Finding that the cutting was getting worse, Coish cut out a series of patterns specially for the plaintiff's guidance, but he did not follow them; when at length Mr. Coish was compelled to discharge the plaintiff—"if I had not," added the defendant, "he would have ruined me." Five days before the plaintiff left, "not a single thing was cut correct," and during that time at least 30 or 40 pairs were cut. Some of these were made up for smaller sizes, but they would not do for what they were cut. Under these circumstances, Mr. Arrakiel contended that the dissolution of the contract was not brought about by Coish, but by the plaintiff himself. When a servant in the position of Pollard, who had had the money, I would leave you instantly," it was tantamount to taking his own discharge; and then his subsequent conduct in the shop clearly showed that he was the party dissatisfied with Coish.

The plaintiff's explanation about the discharge was that, a me time before Mr. Coish returned from Rangoon, he had written to Mr. Coish, telling him that he only retained the shop in order to obtain his passage to England. His cautious refusal to sign the receipt is consistent with this view of his conduct. Is, then, the special contract in this case such as to compel the defendant to pay the plaintiff wages? The only reservation in the contract is in regard to drunkenness—no other kind of misconduct is adverted to. But with regard to the law of master and servant
